

Transform a life, and your own

After enduring a series of seemingly endless illnesses for nearly 20 years, Nicole Wilson was diagnosed with Common Variable Immunodeficiency (CVID). Today, Nicole receives monthly immunoglobulin replacement therapy (IVIG). IVIG is derived from plasma, and replaces the protective antibodies that are missing in her immune system.

“Without these treatments, I would be prone to severe and recurring infections,” Nicole says. “The IVIG allows me to live a healthy life and be involved in my active and energetic little girl’s activities.” IVIG is possible only with the generosity of plasma donors.

These donors are truly lifesavers to Nicole and others living with primary immunodeficiency diseases who require treatment for the rest of their lives.
